DEATH WARNING WRITTEN TO CZAR

"Beware! Your Life Is in Danger!" Reported Inscribed on a Blotting Pad Used by the Ruler of Russia.

The Publishers' Press to-day sent out story over the ticker, dated "St. Petersburg. Sept. 14, via Frontier," and reading:

"A fortnight ago the Czar found written on the blotting pad of his desk the words: 'Beware, your life is threat-

"The Czar at once ordered inquiries to be made in an effort to find the cuiprit, but without avail. "Three days later the incident was

The Czar had now become alarmer and summoned a General, who has a reputation for clever detection. The General fearing that his own life was in danger from the conspirators, surrounded himself with a bodyguard. The next morning he found the following words written on the blotter in nis own room:

"You have nothing to fear, the game we are after is too big for us to trouble about fools like you."

"The entire imperial household is reported to have been in a state of panic ever since the occurrences."

A story similar to the above was cabled from St. Petersburg three weeks ago, and at that time was officially de-clared to be without foundation.
